6 TIPS FOR MULTI-GENERATIONAL TRAVEL

For some families, holidaying en masse with grandparents, aunts, uncles, cousins and everyone in between is a beloved annual tradition. For others, it's a daunting idea. Before planning your next – or first – extended-family trip, consider these six tips.

1. MAKE IT SHORT AND SWEET

If a multi-generational vacation is a first for your family, start with a short excursion. A long-weekend getaway will give a sense of everyone's holiday style, from the early morning adventure seekers to those who recharge best by sleeping in. If a short trip proves successful, plan something longer for a future holiday.

2. PRIORITIZE A CENTRAL DESTINATION

Select a destination that can be easily accessed by everyone in the family, and remember, a full travel day to a distant destination means one less day of valuable time together on either end of the trip.

3. TALK BUDGET

The time to talk money is before you start making reservations. Discuss who will pay for what and how meals, activities and other expenses will be divided.

4. SEEK INPUT AND KEEP AN OPEN MIND

Ask family members what they like to do most on vacation and incorporate those activities into your itinerary. Who knows? You could discover a new shared passion. If grandpa likes to golf, an afternoon together at the driving range might just prove you have what it takes to hit the greens next trip.

5. CREATE HAPPY MEALS

Re-connecting at the end of the day for happy hour isn't just for the adults in the group. A selection of appetizers can serve as an early dinner for the youngest family members without relegating them to the "kids only" table. Once the kids are settled, the adults can linger over dinner and conversation for as long as they please.

6. PLAN FOR FREE TIME

Some of the best bonding moments between family members happen when nothing else is planned. Leave room for relaxation and enjoy one another's company.

FIND YOUR PERFECT ISLAND GETAWAY THIS SUMMER

EASILY ACCESSIBLE YET WORLDS AWAY, THESE SIX LOCAL ISLANDS PROVIDE AMPLE OPPORTUNITIES FOR RELAXING, EXPLORING AND ENJOYING B.C.'S BEST WEST COAST VIBES.

BY STEPHANIE CUNNINGHAM

Photo: Galiano's magnificent sandstone sea caves are best explored by kayak or paddle board.

BEST FOR SCENIC VANTAGE POINTS

Galiano Island: The West Coast is often referred to as the Wet Coast, but Galiano bucks that moniker with the driest and sunniest micro-climate of any Southern Gulf Island.

Equally accessible from both the Lower Mainland and Victoria via BC Ferries, this long, thin island is particularly peaceful with a sparse population of just 1,000 permanent residents. (That is until migration season: situated in the flight path of many migratory birds, 150 different species have been sighted by islanders during the annual travel season.)

From the highest mountaintop viewpoints to the island's varied ocean shoreline, those seeking a spot to truly get away from it all will appreciate Galiano's tranquility. Hikers will want to head for one of the island's many scenic trails including Bodega Ridge with spectacular views over Vancouver Island and the Strait of Georgia, or The Bluffs Nature Protection Area, named after the 100-metre shoreline ridge hovering high above Active Pass.

To best appreciate the island's exceptional coastline, rent a kayak or paddle board to explore the intricate rock formations and sandstone sea caves carved by the power of nature.

At the end of the day, sink into sumptuous farm-to-table and foraged cuisine at the critically acclaimed Pilgrimme restaurant, or visit its sister restaurant, Charmer, for a fresh take on sourdough pizza.

BEST FOR A CAR-FREE AND CAREFREE PICNIC

Saysutshun (Newcastle Island): Rich in history and with plenty of space to roam and explore, car-free Saysutshun off the coast of Nanaimo is the picture-perfect spot for a leisurely picnic or a family reunion.

For thousands of years, the Snuneymuxw people lived on Saysutshun throughout late winter and early spring during the peak of the annual herring run. In the mid-1800s, when the British learned this small island was also a source of coal, the Coast Salish buildings were abandoned, and the first mine was opened. The British renamed the island Newcastle and later used it for everything from quarrying sandstone to a retreat for the wealthy.

Today the island is a protected marine park managed once again by the Snuneymuxw First Nation and is the perfect spot for exploring tidepools, hiking and biking through the woods, or staying overnight at one of the 18 walk-in campsites or five group sites. Visitors can even enjoy a meal or snack at the restored 1930s dance pavilion and tea house, home to the Q'uluc'tun Bistro.

Accessible only by small foot-passenger ferry May to October or by personal watercraft, head to Nanaimo's Maffeo Sutton Park where you'll find ferries departing every half hour for the 10-minute ride to the dock in Mark Bay.

Take a Saysutshun Interpretive Walking Tour to learn about the sacred village sites, stories and cultural history of the Snuneymuxw people.

BEST FOR SPARKING CREATIVITY

Gabriola Island: On Gabriola Island, hand-crafted beauty and natural splendour co-exists side by side.

Known as “The Isle of the Arts,” Gabriola is home to more than 200 artists and creators who work with every medium from ink and oil paints to woodworking, metalwork, basketry and fibre arts. Artist studios and galleries can be found around almost every corner, while festivals, workshops, classes and retreats fill the community calendar.

Perhaps this artistic expression is no surprise given how easy it is to enjoy the island’s spectacular natural environment. Gabriola boasts three provincial parks, dozens of regional and community parks and more public beach access points than any other Gulf Island. Look for the yellow painted concrete blocks marked “Public Access” to find trail heads leading to sandstone beaches along the island’s 98 kilometres of coastline.

Not to be missed are the Malaspina Galleries, a rip curl wave formation carved into the sandstone shoreline by centuries of wind and stormy seas. Tall enough to stand under, this is a perfect spot to take a short walk, lounge on the sun-warmed sandstone ledge or take a cooling dip in the bay.

BEST FOR A QUICK ESCAPE FROM THE BIG CITY

Bowen Island: It takes just a few minutes to feel light years away from the everyday as you make your way to Bowen Island.

Total travel time from downtown Vancouver to the heart of Bowen Island is only one hour, including a 20-minute ferry ride via Horseshoe Bay. Docking at Snug Cove (and who doesn’t want to land in a place called Snug Cove?) it’s just steps to the Snug Café for a delightful breakfast to start your day, or stop by Bowen Island Pub for fish and chips on the sun-filled patio.

Measuring just six by 12 kilometres, hilly Bowen Island is perfectly suited for touring by e-bike or scooter. Don’t have your own? Don’t worry. Bowen eBikes rental company is conveniently located just outside the ferry terminal and Zoom Zoom Bowen rents scooters by the hour, day or longer.

Once you have your ride, it’s time to choose your adventure. Shoppers will enjoy nearby Artisan Square for everything from hand-crafted chocolates to jewellery and one-of-a-kind souvenirs, while outdoor enthusiasts can venture further afield to scenic hikes with views of Howe Sound and the Vancouver city skyline. Or, linger longer at a local guest house or vacation rental.

BEST FOR SOAKING UP TROPICAL VIBES

Hornby Island: Warm aquamarine water in a calm, protected bay lined by a vast white-sand beach – this isn't the tropics, it's Hornby.

Aptly nicknamed “Little Hawaii,” this laid-back isle is a relaxing haven with both pristine beaches for lazing in the sun and hilly terrain for more adventurous pursuits.

South-facing Tribune Bay is the island's crown jewel and is considered one of the warmest salt-water swimming areas on B.C.'s coast. Offshore, the island's crystal-clear waters and gentle currents make it one of the best diving locations in North America. Descend to the depths and come face-to-face with a rich variety of marine life including giant Pacific octopus, wolf eels, rock fish, sea lions, harbour seals and more. And, for those who prefer wheels to water, the island is also renowned for its extensive network of well-maintained mountain biking trails that will delight cyclists of all abilities.

Bonus: Getting to Hornby by car is a two-for-one island experience. From Buckley Bay north of Nanaimo, first take the world's longest cable ferry to Denman Island. Enjoy the rural scenery and perhaps make a stop at one of the many farm-market gates on the drive across the island to the ferry bound for Hornby.

Market Photos: Destination Greater Victoria. All other photos: iStock

BEST FOR BROWSING LOCAL GOODIES

Salt Spring Island: Of the 200 Gulf Islands, Salt Spring is the largest, the most populated (10,000-plus permanent residents) and the most visited. It also happens to be the home of one of the most beloved summer markets in B.C.: the Salt Spring Saturday Market.

Truly a local-produced-only market, all vendors are required to submit proof of residency on Salt Spring to participate and their goods must adhere to the Market Philosophy: “Make it, Bake it, Grow it.” The result is a vast selection of hyper-local produce, arts and crafts, body care, plants and flowers, clothing and so much more. In all, some 140 vendors set up shop each weekend April through October from 9 am to 3 pm at Centennial Park.

After making your rounds at the market, check out some of the other local scenic sights including the funky shops in the town of Ganges, all things lavender at organic farm Lavender & Black, or sample sips at the island's wineries, cidery or craft brewery.

Pro tip: Due to the massive popularity of the weekly market, ferry rides to the island fill up quickly on Saturday mornings. Be sure to plan your ferry trip well in advance to avoid disappointment. 📌
